LEARNING IN THE TIME OF COVID

The 25th India Today Best Colleges Survey delves into how institutes straddled the shift to digital education during the pandemic

BY KAUSHIK DEKA

The past one year has been a defining period for education across the world. The Covid pandemic globally disrupted the fundamental structure of imparting institutional education like never before. India was no exception. Campus activity in schools, colleges and universities across the country came to a grinding halt. As learning went digital, the buzz of the physical classroom was replaced by clicks on mobile phones and computers. Interaction among peers shifted from canteens and libraries to WhatsApp chat groups.

In this changed scenario, the 25th India Today Best Colleges Survey, conducted by the reputed market research agency Marketing & Development Research Associates (MDRA), was fraught with multiple challenges. The lockdown and other Covid restrictions had kept most campuses shut for the greater part of 2020. It was next to impossible to physically audit the campuses of the participating institutes. Many faculties and administrators were down with Covid. Despite these limitations, colleges showed a remarkable enthusiasm to participate in our survey—one that has over the years come to be recognised as the final word on mapping college education in India. The number of participating institutes rose from 1,302 last year to 1,559 this time. The number of participating colleges has almost doubled over the past four years.
