DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

ACADEMIC YEAR 2023-2024

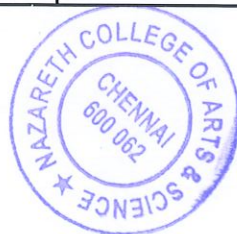

ADVANCED LEARNERS REPORT

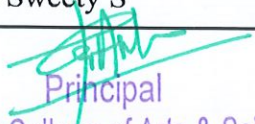

In the academic year 2023-2024, the Department of English focused on identifying and nurturing the talents of outstanding students, fostering their academic and communication skills. These students consistently demonstrated excellence, particularly in their communication abilities. We actively engaged advanced learners in seminars, both within the college and at inter-college events, and encouraged them to undertake mini projects as part of their studies. They also explored advanced topics, engaging with complex literary theories to broaden their understanding.

To enhance critical thinking, we provided thought-provoking questions and encouraged participation in a variety of activities such as e-quizzes, webinars, conferences, and seminars. Advanced learners were involved in extensive reading tasks, such as developing comprehension questions at various cognitive levels, crafting plots and dialogues, scripting, and editing passages. We encouraged them to hone professional skills, including writing articles for both co-authored and individual projects.

Peer tutoring played a significant role, as these students guided their peers. They took on leadership roles within the department, organizing events and serving on committees. Their participation extended to various programs under Cells and Associations, contributing to both academic and cultural activities at intra- and inter-collegiate levels. This comprehensive involvement helped foster a well-rounded academic and professional development experience.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

ACADEMIC YEAR 2023-2024

ADVANCED LEARNERS REPORT

The Department of Commerce has identified the talented students for the 2023–2024 academic year and is preparing them for academic success. These students are very good communicators. They are exceptional and have consistently demonstrated their superiority over the years. We strongly encourage advanced students to engage in the many seminars, best practices, and related events held at the college and at Inter College.

Students have had discussions on the subject's advanced subjects and practical sessions. More complicated exercise problems were provided to solve in order to give a greater understanding of the subject matter. Students were given questions from previous years to help them develop higher-level thinking abilities.

Participation in a range of events and activities, including debates, webinars, conferences, seminars, Tableau, Best Manager, newspaper analysis, logo design, and online quizzes, was encouraged of the students. We continue to do mock tests and interviews to assist them in preparing for the job placements. We support the students in growing in self-awareness. Advanced students were invited to join the department program's Association committee.

They had the chance to become proficient in the rituals of several departmental gatherings. They were urged to take part in events that bridged and complemented different cultures.

Department of Computer Science

Academic Year 2023 – 2024

Slow Learners Report

The Department of Computer Science conducted an analysis of slow learners in the First, Second, and Third years. This evaluation identified 21 students from I B.Sc CS, 19 students from II B.Sc CS, and 15 students from III B.Sc CS as slow learners based on their academic performance. The selection process was guided by teacher feedback to determine which students needed extra support. This approach effectively highlighted those who consistently underperformed and required additional assistance.

Actions Taken:

To help these students improve, several actions were taken:

- Question Bank with Answers:

- A question bank with answers was provided for each unit. The bank included frequently asked questions from past exams with detailed answers.
- Students were encouraged to read the questions and answers carefully and practice writing their own answers to improve their understanding.

- Regular Revision Sessions:

- Extra revision sessions were organized to go over difficult topics and answer students' questions.
- These sessions gave students the chance to review key concepts and clarify doubts.

- Individual Consultations:

- Students were offered one-on-one time with instructors to get personalized help with their studies.
- Instructors addressed each student's specific difficulties and provided additional guidance.

Outcome:

These actions led to noticeable improvement in the students' academic performance. Most of the students were able to pass their exams, and their overall grades improved. They also became more confident and participated more in class discussions. Many students who had struggled before were now more engaged and motivated to continue learning. The use of question banks, along with personal guidance and regular monitoring, helped students catch up with their studies.
