A Transportation Problems and Assignment Problems are types of Linear Programming Problems. Transportation Problem deals with the optimal distribution of goods or resources from multiple sources to multiple destinations. While Assignment Problem deals with allocating tasks, jobs, or resources one-to-one.

5.Surplus and slack variables do not affect the objective function or the feasible region of the linear programming problem. They simply allow us to convert inequality constraints into equality constraints, which makes the problem easier to solve using standard linear algebra techniques.

1. Definitions of OR:

Skip to main content

search (OR) is a discipline that uses mathematical models, statistical optimization techniques to make informed decisions.

- OR is the application of scientific methods and techniques to solve complex problems in various fields, such as business, engineering, and healthcare.

2. Scope of OR:

The scope of OR is vast and covers a wide range of applications. It can be used in:

- Supply chain management to optimize inventory levels, transportation routes, and production schedules.
- Project management to allocate resources, schedule tasks, and minimize project duration.
- Financial planning to optimize investment portfolios, risk management, and asset allocation.
- Healthcare systems to improve patient flow, optimize resource allocation, and enhance healthcare delivery.
- Manufacturing and operations management to optimize production processes, scheduling, and quality control.

3. Methods in OR:

- Mathematical modeling: OR uses mathematical equations and models to represent real-world problems and find optimal solutions.
- Optimization techniques: OR employs algorithms and optimization methods to find the best possible solution within given constraints.
- Statistical analysis: OR utilizes statistical methods to analyze data, make predictions, and estimate probabilities.
- Simulation: OR uses simulation techniques to model and analyze complex systems and evaluate different scenarios.
- Decision analysis: OR provides frameworks and tools to support decision-making processes and evaluate alternative options.

4. Tools in OR:

- Linear programming: A mathematical technique used to optimize linear objective functions subject to linear constraints.
- Network analysis: A method to model and analyze complex networks, such as transportation or communication networks.
- Decision trees: A graphical tool used to analyze decision-making processes and evaluate different options.
- Queuing theory: A mathematical approach to analyze waiting lines and optimize resource allocation in service systems.
- Forecasting methods: Statistical techniques used to predict future trends and outcomes based on historical data.

Operations research (British English: operational research) (U.S. Air Force Specialty Code: Operations Analysis), often shortened to the initialism OR, is a discipline that deals with the development and application of analytical methods to improve decision-making.[1] The term management science is occasionally used as a synonym.[2]

Employing techniques from other mathematical sciences, such as modeling, statistics, and optimization, operations research arrives at optimal or near-optimal solutions to decision-making problems. Because of its emphasis on practical applications, operations research has overlapped with many other disciplines, notably industrial engineering. Operations research is often concerned with determining the extreme values of some real-world objective: the maximum (of profit, performance, or yield) or minimum (of loss, risk, or cost). Originating in military efforts before World War II, its techniques have grown to concern problems in a variety of industries.[3]

DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

ACADEMIC YEAR 2023-2024

ICT REPORT

The Department of English has effectively integrated Information and Communication Technology (ICT) tools to enhance teaching and learning experiences. Google Classroom (GCR) serves as a central platform for distributing resources, assignments, and fostering communication between students and instructors. YouTube links is used to supplement lessons with relevant video content, such as literary analysis and author studies, enriching students' understanding of texts. Video lectures provide flexible, self-paced learning opportunities, allowing students to review complex concepts at their own pace. Projectors enable dynamic presentations, incorporating multimedia elements to clarify themes and foster interactive discussions. Additionally, we screened the prescribed film adaptation of The Old Man and the Sea which enhances students' understanding of the novel, allowing for a comparison between the text and its visual interpretation. These technologies promote engagement, critical thinking, and deeper comprehension, offering diverse and accessible learning experiences that cater to various learning styles.
